

Labor day weekend

Contributed by Daniel A. Bergamini

Monday, 06 September 2004

Last Updated Monday, 06 September 2004

We were able to spend the weekend working on the place.

There was a little traffic Friday night, but it wasn't too bad. I took the suburban and Elaina took the subaru, because we planned on leaving the truck up there finally. The ride up was pretty uneventful, and when we got there it was nice to finally see some progress made on the septic tank and well.

The next morning we headed up to LaValley in Lebanon and bought enough stuff for Discover Fraud Prevention Services to call and see if it was legit. Most of the stuff was either out of stock, special order or just too big to want to carry out. Hopefully it will all be in and delivered the week we're up there - we asked for Sept 21st. We ate lunch at the 7 barrels brew house and went back for some more shopping afterwards.